A Dollar that Will Go a Good Ways.
"Times are dreadfully hard, now," said the grocer, "and money is hard to get, and after a fellow gets it, it doesn't seem to do much good. A dollar doesn't go very far nowadays."

"Oh, it does," broke in the man with a blue dress shirt, "here's a dollar that I've carried with me all the way from Fiske's. I've tried my best to get rid of it, and can't. It's a stayer, if it is bogus."—Chicago Herald.

Evidence of Total Depravity.
"How is it that you can tell shopkeepers' asked a caller, addressing the editor of the fish story department.
"Well, you see," replied the editor,
"our fish are as good as dead."

"What has that to do with it?"
"A great deal," when we are writing fish stories we usually have Anna with us to tell us."

Some Good Advice.
Two tramps, one of them a young man, the other well advanced in life, had just left a house where they had been sup-pered with a beautiful dinner.

"I say, Bill," queried the younger of the two, "where do you suppose we'll get our supper?"
"The old tramp turned on him in disgust."

"Here you've just had your dinner," he said, "and you begin to wonder where you'll get supper. If that's the kind of disposition you've got, young fellow, you had better quit the profession and go to work."—Lafayette.

Legal Notice.
Major Gassaway, a prominent An-tonian lawyer, succeeded in obtaining the acquittal of a horse thief, who was tried in the district court in and for the county of Berks.

"Major," said the acquitted man, "I don't know how to pay you for your kindness. I haven't got any money just now."

"Well, now that you are foot loose again you will soon have some money, or horse, which is just as good, but in the meantime you mention my name to other members of the gang and friends, in case they need the services of an attorney in any of the frontier counties," said the lawyer.

"Will do, major. You shall have all our business."—St. Louis.

Johnnie the next morning after the children's party. "You didn't get any ice cream last night?"
"No, I didn't. I didn't want any. I don't like vanilla. I had lots of oysters and chicken salad."

"You didn't get any cake, though?"
"No, I didn't. I didn't want any. I

Waiting.
When all the happy words and little Annie filled with innocent's smiles, The girl of youth, the best of all,
The flying atoms, the whispering trees,
My heart unchanged still one song,
"My love, my love," the whole year long.

For all the mystery of life,
The hope of dawn, the night's despair,
The grief of youth, the best of all,
The flying atoms, the whispering trees,
My heart unchanged still one song,
"My love, my love," the whole year long.

The summer winds that come and go,
The hope of dawn, the night's despair,
The grief of youth, the best of all,
The flying atoms, the whispering trees,
My heart unchanged still one song,
"My love, my love," the whole year long.

From out the sunset's crimson flame,
The hope of dawn, the night's despair,
The grief of youth, the best of all,
The flying atoms, the whispering trees,
My heart unchanged still one song,
"My love, my love," the whole year long.

THE DENTIST'S STORY.
An up-town dentist was surprised one morning last week as he entered his office from an adjoining parlor by the appearance of a young-looking young man in a dress suit, who was reclining in the spacious operating chair, and smoking a cigar.

The young man recognized the dentist through the aureole of smoke he remarked, with the tranquillity of one who is used to that sort of thing:
"Doctor, I want a tooth filled."

The professional gentleman, who also looked a little weary, took a needle-like instrument from a marble shelf with his right hand, and, with his left, gently pulled down the young man's chin, disclosing an anterior that fairly glittered with gold. As the dentist put his head closer to the young man's mouth and tapped gently on the only tooth that seemed to have any of its original structure left, he became aware that his patient had become a professional visitor, but he was totally unprepared for the visitor's luxurious, free-and-easy attitude.

A FURGOTTEN VETERAN.
Left Behind in the Desert by All His Comrades.

With Malaria Pinned to His Breast He Faced the Arab Fox.

He had been thrown out as a vidette, and for hours he had peeped into the darkness around him to watch for the slightest sign of danger.
—listened like one who realized that the wily Arab of the desert steals upon his prey with all the silent cunning of the American Indian. As the stars of the night began to pale before the dawn of day he felt like one regretted. While he watched, the night had, for once, seemed to sleep.
Daylight would bring a continuation of the march, and every hour would witness a skirmish, but even a battle does not unnerve a man like standing victims on a lone and dangerous post.

What! Has he become blind? Daylight now covers the desert, and the victims are looking towards the camp of the night. There is no camp. At midnight he left his post, and he has been looking for him since. He looks to the right, but there is no victims. He looks to the left—no living thing meets his eyes.

He stands and peers and stares and blinks. Is he awake? If so, is he blind? Has the night played some strange trick on him in this land of strange things and strange fancies?

He moves toward the spot where the night halt was made, but he advances slowly and cautiously, and he hesitates now and then as if to reason with himself. Ah! He is neither blind nor deaf. Here is a cap—there is a belt—here a rope—there a sack, to prove that the camp had been here. Here are the tracks of men and camels, there a broad trail leading away to the south.

In the stillness of night a messenger had come to the little band, ordering an instant change of camp. Ordered, and the men had moved on, and the victims had been left behind. He had been left behind, and he had been

Leaving on his carbine and looking over the trail left to show the change of camp, the soldier reasoned it all out. His command had been gone for hours. He was alone and on foot.
Overtake them! He snatched up a thought. The sun and sand were thirsty as the spears and bullets of the Arabs. He had neither food nor water.
A hundred miles of burning sands and hot winds lay between him and a blade of grass—a single drop of water.

The soldier turned to survey his desert plain. To the east, nothing but sand; to the north, nothing but sand; to the west, nothing but sand; to the south, nothing but sand. He had been left behind, and he had been left behind, and he had been left behind.

Without undue haste—with the dignity befitting an old veteran—the soldier took from his breast and planned to his coat a medal. Upon its right side were the words: "The Boer War." He planned on another which said:
"For Services in Zululani." There was a third—fourth—a fifth. In his twenty years of soldier life this old man had a thousand times been a captain for a battle.

Death was riding down upon him.
He was alone and on foot. Overtake them! He snatched up a thought. The sun and sand were thirsty as the spears and bullets of the Arabs. He had neither food nor water. A hundred miles

Robust Health

Is not always enjoyed by those who seem to possess it. The faintest of ailments, the slightest of disorders, may be the harbinger of a more serious condition. In time, the system will be weakened, and the body will be the worse for it. It is the duty of every person to keep the system in good health, and to avoid all that may weaken it. The best way to do this is by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a blood purifier, and it will cleanse the system of all impurities. It will also strengthen the system, and give it the power to resist all diseases. It is the best medicine for all skin diseases, and for all diseases of the blood. It is the best medicine for all diseases of the system, and for all diseases of the body.
